ABOUT ME

My name is João Carlos Alves, born and raised in São Paulo City, I'm married and Amanda's dad.

I started working with print artworks in a bureu when I was 13 years old. Passing through many professional areas, in 2008 I decided to learn how to develop websites. And one year late I created my first website called Old School Gamer, that was my "code school and web laboratory".

In 2010, already as Front end developer (and Web Designer too), I built my career working in places like Diretta, LEN, Multilaser and Plano Digital. And I had a great time doing my best on projects for clients like Itaú, Ajinomoto, Accentiv'Mimética, Doc. Oswaldo Cruz and Santa Joana hospitals, Sodexo, Vladimir Herzog Institute and great restaurants like Zucco, Kinoshita, Almanara, and Café Girondino.

From 2014 until July/2016, I started a small web studio called Pool House, which I did all the branding and programming.

Currently, I'm available for full time jobs and freelance.
